Slab

Slab is a stencil type system comprising three styles – Slab Soft, Slab Hard and Slab Bloc – each drawn in a single weight and available in both proportionally spaced and monospaced versions.

Stencil lettering prioritises economy, efficiency and speed of reproduction as it was developed originally for practical applications ranging from commercial packaging and signage to military livery and equipment. Its distinctive forms are shaped by the constraints of the stencil-cutting process, which requires letters to be reduced to simple, robust structures.

The Slab collection combines this utilitarian approach with early modernist ideas about constructed geometric alphabets, in which letters are assembled from basic modular components. By extending the logic of stencil construction into a set of systematic principles, Slab explores the possibilities of typographic form through a deliberately restricted set of elements.

Character Set

Latin 1 standard character set in OTF, TTF, WOFF and WOFF 2 encoding.

Alternate forms are shown here in green.

Note: In Slab monospaced variants (Slab Soft Mono, Slab Hard Mono and Slab Bloc Mono), the bracketleft and bracketright character slots have been replaced with half-width and quarter-width space characters respectively, allowing for modular spacing adjustments in page layouts. Word spacing should be preset at 100 per cent.
